
Monkey Quits Tree And Makes Getaway

The university medical school's monkey, which spent three days in a campus treetop, came down for a drink of water today, ran through a group of students and ducked into the janitor's room at Neff hall—and then vanished into thin air.

Presumably he is wandering somewhere in the university's power and heating tunnels under the campus.