
Monkey Discovered But Evades Capture

The monkey which escaped from the animal pens at the University medical school Monday was discovered in a tree on Elm street, but the animal went still higher in the tree when police arrived to capture it and is still at large.

Police and the caretaker at the medical school said they were unable to catch the monkey, one of several used at the university for experimental purposes, as it swung through the tree top.
